

THE FRIENDS OF APHRODISIAS TRUST

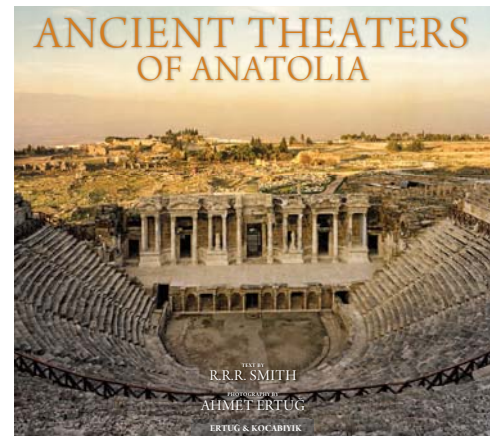

THOMAS KAEFER

IN CONVERSATION WITH BERT SMITH AND TREVOR PROUDFOOT
ON HIS WORK AS ARCHITECT IN CHIEF AT APHRODISIAS

TUESDAY 21 APRIL 2015, 6.30PM

DAUNT BOOKS, 83 MARYLEBONE HIGH STREET W1

Having finished the 'rebuild' of the Celsius Library at Ephesus more than a quarter of a century ago, Thomas Kaefler and Gerhard Paul were invited by Kenan Erim, then Director of Excavations at Aphrodisias, to rebuild the gateway into the Precinct of the Temple of Aphrodite, now known as the Tetrapylon. They completed the re-erection of this magnificent monument in 1990. Twenty five years later, both architects are still at work in the Sebasteion and Hadrianic Baths. It is a unique honour for the Friends not only to have Thomas Kaefler talk to us in London on the anastylosis of these fine buildings but also to have the chance to launch Ahmet Ertuğ's Ancient Theaters of Anatolia, the text of which is by Bert Smith – a magnificent tome: interesting, beautiful and destined, like all previous Ertuğ books, to become a collectors' item.

There is no charge for this event, but the Friends of Aphrodisias Trust would welcome a donation of £25 per person to cover the expenses of the party and Thomas' flight from Vienna.

Please let me know as soon as possible if you would like to join us by completing the form below and returning it to 20 Ripplevale Grove, London N1 1HU or patriciadaunt@btinternet.com.
